

Tracton Biodiversity Group is proud to host Ireland's first screening of the People's Emergency Briefing – a film presented by Chris Packham, bringing together leading experts on the serious threats to society from climate change and nature loss, but also the enormous benefits of bold action.

After a recent UK screening, one audience member wrote: "It made me angry, terrified, hopeful, and excited all at once. Angry because we know so much about the harm we're causing and what we could do about it, and yet we continue to sleepwalk into disaster. Terrified because even though I thought I was prepared for some of the facts, I really wasn't. Hopeful because I could see the smiles and nods in the room as we shared all of the amazing initiatives and work already happening. Excited because I can really feel the energy for change building at the moment."

Well-known Cork documentary filmmaker and social commentator Kev Collins will be introducing the film and opening the public discussion following the screening, which will be facilitated by members of the Tracton Biodiversity Group.

Everyone is welcome! Tickets are free, but seats are limited, so please book a spot early to avoid disappointment.

The Inkwel Theatre bar will be open and light refreshments will be served.

Click here to secure your seat:

<https://www.eventbrite.ie/e/peoples-emergency-briefing-film-screening-public-discussion-tickets-1987359224940?>

View the trailer here:

<https://youtu.be/5x2XhvEbz24?>